

XPLike.Plesk meets Joomla 1.5

I finally got round to re-writing the xplike.plesk template to work with Joomla 1.5. The original xplike.plesk template was written by SWSOft (now known as Parallels - the makers of Plesk), and released under the GPL for Mambo 4.5.0. I tweaked it to work on Mambo 4.5.1, and Joomla 1.0, and it proved very popular. As I did not write the template (just modified it), it was difficult for me to provide support for it. It also did not escape my notice that the code in the template was heavyweight and ugly (although the design itself is great).

So, I re-wrote the whole thing from scratch for Joomla 1.5. The result is much improved - a very lightweight, standards-compliant, accessible, search-engine-friendly, tableless template, with collapsible menus (that 'remember' your preferences if you re-visit the site within 30 days), a resizable header area (lots of people wanted a custom-sized header so that their company logo would fit), and a choice of 3 colour schemes.

For more information, and to download, visit: <http://www.netshinehosting.com/home-page/free-joomla-1.5-templates.html>